

Welcome to ASS

ASS stands for Antarctic Stock Simulation

ASS is a new stock exchange to list companies changing the world. From space travel to sex robots, the primary listing criterion on ASS is that the company (asscorp) must change the world. This makes asscorps a group of vetted companies, vetted by ASS' board. ASS the stock exchange lists ASS the company. ASS the company manages ASS the stock exchange.

Code for ASS is public to allow anyone to simulate a market of their own and play with stocks. To become part of the shared simulation, one needs to own at least 1 share in ASS. This share creates memory for a user in the code ASS runs on. This memory allows shares you buy and sell to get incorporated in the global ledger i.e., it makes you part of a shared simulation instead of a simulation of your own running on your local machine.

Once you buy a share of ASS (listed at 1000 USD as of 31 July 2023), you will be able to make real purchases in other listed companies. Basically, the username you enter in ASS will become a global user existing in every copy of ASS, like Noorul Ali is now. Noorul Ali currently owns all asscorps and exists in base code as an owner. A share in ASS gives you a spot in the base code of the Antarctic Stock Simulation.

Think of this share as your pass to buy the world's greatest companies

Parallels with Bitcoin

You can operate your own ledger of Bitcoin. Until it matches the shared ledger everyone else has, your ledger is useless. This shared ledger is a shared simulation: data that everyone agrees to be true.

Like Bitcoin, ASS works on shared simulation. Base code for ASS is modifiable by all users but modifications are propagated only by ASS owners. Other users may modify their ledgers to play their own simulations, but base simulation is maintained. Noorul Ali is part of base simulation by design as he is the ASS' architect.

This base simulation is ground reality. Shareholders in base simulation actually own stocks in asscorps. This is legally enforceable.

Like Bitcoin, ASS is designed to eliminate borders from stock exchange. By hosting in cyberspace, we ensure any company anywhere can become an asscorp and get investments from any ASS shareholder in the world.

Unlike Bitcoin, ASS maintains centralized control over who gets listed on ASS to prevent fraud.

A note from the architect of ASS,

Noorul Ali

I built ASS because my time is valuable. I cannot waste it in fundraising, but capital is necessary to build great things. I want to bypass banks, hedge funds, and venture capitalists. I know the things I'm building are great, but I need to spend time building them, not selling them.

To make fundraising asynchronous, I built my own exchange. Now people can invest in my visions without me needing to actively sell it to them. My work speaks for itself, and I give you a chance to be part of it.

Don't take shares listed on ASS lightly,

Your support for my vision,

I will never forget.

These shares will be your tickets to the moon, immortality, and fear park (to name a few things I have in store).

Welcome to Antarctic Stock Simulation.

A handwritten signature in white ink, appearing to read 'N Ali'.